South Central Massachusetts is steeped in American history. While driving through the region, enjoy the sights of beautiful churches, Colonial-era homes, classic town commons and historic mills. The following areas of interest are well worth a visit.

STURBRIDGE

Old Sturbridge Village

(www.osv.org) is a 'must-see' destination – one of the country's oldest and largest living history museums, with 40 restored antique buildings, three authentic water-powered mills, two covered bridges, and a working farm with 60 farm animals set among 200 acres of pristine woods and fields. Visitors can participate in a variety of hands-on crafts and activities. Famous for its staff of costumed historic interpreters, OSV recreates life in a working farm village from 1790 to 1840, and has been a favorite destination for millions of schoolchildren for more than 60 years.

praying for physical and spiritual healing. Built in 1883, the church combined with St. Patrick's in 1887. In 1971, an Icon Chapel and Museum opened with a unique collection of Russian icons. The Shrine, Chapel, Museum and gift shop open 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. every day.

Tantusques

A short loop trail leads through quiet woods; a spur trail passes through the Leadmine Wildlife Management Area and ends at the Robert Crowl Site. Visitors can view the foundations of the house and barn of the African-American and Native American man who worked at the mine in the 1850s.

The Nipmuc originally mined here for graphite to make ceremonial paints. In 1644, John Winthrop, Jr., son of the first governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, purchased the mine with hopes of extracting lead and iron. In the early 19th century, Captain Joseph Dixon and his son worked here before founding the J. D. Crucible Company of New Jersey, famous manufacturers of pencils.

Today, careful observers can see the mine cuts, ditches, and tailings piles made by the various mining operations. The mineshaft that tunnels into the face of the low ridge is the most recent of all the excavations, dating to 1902. Most of the mining at Tantusques was of the open trench variety. The cut along the top of the ridge is the partially filled-in remainder of what was once a several thousand foot-long trench that followed the vein of graphite.

Sturbridge Common, founded in the 1730's, is a small and picturesque town. At the traffic light at the center of town is the Joshua Hyde Library, the Federated Church and the town hall. Across from the library is the Old Burial Ground, a resting place for many Revolutionary War veterans.

Old Burial Ground

Diagonally across the street from the cemetery is the Sturbridge common. During the Revolutionary War, it was the scene of great activity, including militia drills and the collection of military supplies. At the common, a cavalry company was raised and sent to serve with George Washington's Continental Army. Colonel Ebenezer Crafts, who was the founder and keeper of the Publick House, personally raised and equipped the company. The Publick House, which dates back to 1771, is across Route 131 opposite the common. It was a favorite colonial stopping place along the old Boston Post Road.

CHARLTON

The Rider Tavern (www.charltonhistoricalsociety.org)

Home to the Charlton Historical Society, the Rider Tavern is open seasonally to the public and available for group tours. Built in 1797 by Eli Wheelock, a local innkeeper and distiller, to serve guests along the road between Worcester and Hartford, the Rider Tavern is “one of the least altered and best documented examples of a wayside tavern of the Federal period in New England.”

“Grizzly” Adams’ Grave

Formerly the Old Burying Ground, Bay Path Cemetery in Charlton is home to the burial site of John Capen Adams, the legendary 19th-century mountain man and bear-tamer known as Grizzly Adams. After both befriending and killed grizzly bears in the Rockies, he later joined P.T. Barnum, and toured with the circus show.
